Short clinical trials reports

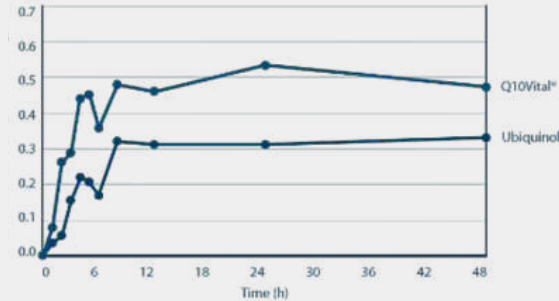

• Bioequivalence studies

The bioavailability of Q10Vital® is significantly higher (4-fold) compared to crystalline (basic) CoQ10.

Zmitek, J., Smidovnik et al. (2008). Relative bioavailability of two forms of a novel water soluble coenzyme Q10. Ann.nutr metab. 52, vol 4, 281-287.

• Absorption in older adults

The bioavailability of Q10Vital® is 1.5 times better (but not statistically significant) compared to ubiquinol. This was the first and thus far only clinical comparative study of CoQ10 formulations in older adults.

Pravst, I., Rodríguez Aguilera, J. C., Cortes Rodriguez, A. B., Jazbar, J., Locatelli, I., Hristov, H., & Žmitek, K. (2020). Comparative Bioavailability of Different Coenzyme Q10 Formulations in Healthy Elderly Individuals. Nutrients, 12(3), 784. <https://doi.org/10.3390/nu12030784>

• Beauty study

Regular daily supplementation with 50 mg of Q10Vital® resulted in significantly decreased periorbital wrinkle area.

Žmitek, K., Pogačnik, T., Mervic, L., Žmitek, J., & Pravst, I. (2017). The effect of dietary intake of coenzyme Q10 on skin parameters and condition: Results of a randomised, placebo-controlled, double-blind study. BioFactors (Oxford, England), 43(1), 132–140. <https://doi.org/10.1002/biof.1316>
